Introduction

Yemen has been suffering from an aggressive war launched by the coalition, which has repeatedly violated the rights of civilians and committed horrific crimes against them with complete disregard for human and moral values, leaving thousands killed and injured. Since the onset of the aggression on March 26, 2015, the coalition has persisted in committing massacres against civilians. This is vividly demonstrated by the horrific crime committed against civilians at the Grand Hall (Al-Kubra Hall), where around 2,000 people—including children—had gathered to offer their condolences to Al-Ruwaishan family. Coalition aircraft targeted the hall, resulting in hundreds of casualties, both killed and wounded. The funeral gathering was transformed into a tragedy for hundreds of families and a sea of blood and grief. The airstrikes left behind painful memories and tragedies that the victims' families will never forget.

The coalition's continued airstrikes against civilians have been fueled by international silence regarding these war crimes and crimes against humanity. The United Nations has failed to hold the coalition accountable for any of its crimes in Yemen, essentially granting it a green light to continue such massacres—most notably by removing the coalition from the list of child killers. The UN has remained a bystander in the face of these ongoing crimes and the blockade imposed on the Yemeni people, including children, whose rights international organizations and global powers claim to protect. Dozens of children fell victim to this particular massacre. Furthermore, these nations and UN bodies have failed to curb arms sales from countries like the United States and the United Kingdom to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, enabling the coalition to persist in committing the most terrible atrocities against childhood in Yemen.

Executive summary

The report titled "Humanity… Victim of Aggression's Fangs" documents the massacre committed by coalition aircraft on Saturday, October 8, 2016. The attack targeted the Grand Hall (Al-Kubra Hall) during a funeral reception for Al-Ruwaishan family. In this crime, the aggression acted like a predatory beast, sinking its fangs into the bodies of civilians without distinguishing between civilian or military personnel, young or old, youth or elderly.

The airstrikes reduced the hall and everyone inside to rubble, intermingled with the blood and remains of the victims—many of whom were burned beyond recognition. This brutal strike left everyone inside the hall dead or wounded under the collapsed structure.

In this report, we detail the specifics of the crime and witnesses' testimonies, while also addressing its legal framework under international law and conventions, alongside the positions taken by the United Nations and the international community regarding this atrocity.

Methodology

This report is based on the organization's statistics regarding the details of the crime and the number of victims, as well as on interviews conducted with witnesses. It also relies on international legal texts, treaties and conventions to outline the legal framework of the crime committed against those attending Al-Ruwaishan mourning gathering in Al-Sabeen District, Capital Secretariat.

A brief overview of The Grand Hall

Al-Kubra Hall (The Grand Hall): A venue used for hosting social events such as weddings and funeral receptions, located in Al-Khamseen area of Al-Sabeen District in the Capital Secretariat.

Details of the massacre of the aggression coalition on a funeral gathering in The Grand Hall

On October 8, 2016, Al-Kubra Hall was packed with thousands of Yemenis who had gathered to offer their condolences on the passing of Sheikh Ali Al-Ruwaishan. The event was purely social and humanitarian, making an attack by the coalition entirely unexpected, especially since the funeral reception had been publicly announced and invitations were shared across social media platforms.

Between 3:00 PM and 4:00 PM, while the hall was crowded with thousands of mourners, attendees and residents of nearby neighborhoods were shocked by the strike of a missile launched by a coalition warplane. The initial blast killed and wounded hundreds of people, including children. Approximately seven minutes later, a second missile struck, directly targeting first responders, the injured, and those trapped under the rubble, leaving behind a bloody scene of casualties, scattered remains, and fires.

The Grand Hall was completely destroyed, leaving nothing of the large structure except crumbling walls, charred ceilings, cracked surfaces, and collapsed pillars. Amidst the debris lay the blood-stained bodies and dismembered remains of victims torn apart by the brutal coalition airstrikes.

Killed: 193 civilians including 33 children

Injured: 890 civilians including 40 children

Grand Hall Survivors: living witnesses to the tragedy

Hundreds of survivors from the mourning hall massacre committed by coalition aircraft in Sana'a have endured—and continue to suffer—profound pain and severe agony. The Ministry of Health and its medical staff issued an urgent appeal to all free people around the world to intervene to break the blockade, evacuate hundreds of critically injured victims, and announce the presence of a number of unidentified bodies.

Sana'a's hospitals, already suffering under the oppression of the blockade, were crowded with hundreds of wounded victims from this massacre, alongside victims of previous coalition atrocities. From their hospital beds of pain, the wounded who were able to speak held the United Nations responsible for its shameful silence regarding more than 300 critical cases facing imminent death. They stressed that this silence is a disgraceful scandal that history will immortalize if the UN continues to shirk its responsibility to lift the airport blockade—a measure aimed at killing those who remain.

Young Hussein Ali Hadi, one of the survivors of the massacre who lost his right leg, recalls horrifying details a month after the tragedy. He recounts that moments after entering the mourning hall with his father, he thought the reality was a nightmare, only to lose his right leg when the hall was engulfed in flames by a second wave of American weapons of death.

Hussein, a student who had just completed primary school, notes that he has serious goals in life, and that the disability inflicted upon him by the aggression will not stand in his way. Despite his young age, he firmly believes that his destiny, and that of all Yemenis, is to be devoted to God and the homeland.

Many others besides Hussein had parts of their bodies severed by Saudi Arabia, while countless lives were cut short. Among them was Dr. Shaif Jarallah, 45, who holds a doctorate in science and serves as a consultant to the Ministry of Human Rights. As one of the eyewitnesses to the crime, he miraculously survived death, recalling in an interview:

"I went with a group of my relatives to offer our condolences to Al-Ruwaishan family, with whom I share marital ties. Thousands of others were also present to offer their sympathies. Between 3:00 and 3:30 PM on that dark day, I lived through a scene of certain death inside a mass incineration for hundreds of people inside the hall, as missiles from aircraft driven by human hatred rained down directly on our heads.

When the first missile struck, it landed approximately twenty meters away from me. It triggered a massive explosion, blasting the hall's roof into the air to reveal the open sky. A towering pile of fire and debris rose several meters high, and an intense fire broke out right where the missile hit, consuming the bodies of hundreds inside the hall. The blast hurled me across the room, and I found myself lying on the ground, pinned between bodies above and beneath me. I managed to stand up with difficulty despite a head injury. Trying to recall the direction of the hall's exit, I rushed toward it in sheer panic and shock to save my life, walking over corpses and dismembered remains. Although it took me barely 60 seconds to reach the exit, it felt like long hours. I never thought I would make it out.

Unconsciously, I sprinted toward the main outer gate. The scene along the roughly 100-meter corridor leading to it was horrifying and terrifying—bodies were scattered, and limbs were strewn everywhere. Just before reaching the main gate, I looked to my right toward the ground floor of the hall and saw parked cars burning with people trapped inside. The indescribable stench of burning human flesh filled the air.

I passed the outer gate and began to regain my focus when I heard the sound of the warplane returning overhead. Moments later, I saw a missile with my own eyes strike the other side of the hall. Hundreds of victims were still inside, along with many civilian first responders who had rushed to rescue them, resulting in another horrific massacre."

Dr. Shaif added: "I am certain that the perpetrators intended through these consecutive strikes to deliberately annihilate everyone in the hall. It was a complete massacre and genocide in every sense of the word. Those who participated in the aggression against Yemen and caused this atrocious massacre—and all the massacres committed over the past year and a half—must be brought to justice. I am confident that the day of reckoning will come, no matter how long it takes, and justice will prevail for the victims. I lost many relatives and acquaintances in this inferno, leaving the entire nation of Yemen shrouded in grief."

The Great Hall massacre in the Yemeni capital, Sana'a, will remain engraved in the memory of Yemenis—a lasting testament to the largest massacre committed by coalition aircraft led by Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. Despite admissions of responsibility and widespread international and regional condemnations, the coalition's crimes have not ceased, shielded by the silence of the international community, which has failed to halt the ongoing series of atrocities against the Yemeni people.

The aggression acknowledges committing the massacre

Initially, the coalition denied targeting the Grand Hall in Sana'a. However, nearly a week later, on Saturday, October 15, 2016, coalition forces issued a statement to the media admitting responsibility for the strike. According to the statement, coalition aircraft carried out the attack based on misleading and incorrect intelligence provided by officials within the Yemeni military staff—a statement in which the coalition also pledged to compensate the victims.

This acknowledgment came days late, following an interim period during which coalition leadership repeatedly sought to deny involvement. Coalition-aligned media outlets published misleading reports attempting to shift blame, attributing the attack to Al-Qaeda by circulating a statement allegedly issued by the terrorist group claiming a suicide bomber had detonated himself inside the hall. They also pointed fingers at the Houthis, alleging that the explosions resulted from missiles fired to settle scores with their ally, former President Ali Abdullah Saleh.

Despite the coalition's initial denials, numerous countries and international organizations—led by the United Nations—directly implicated the Saudi-led coalition in their official statements and condemnations. This clearly demonstrated widespread skepticism toward the coalition's denials and its attempts to evade responsibility by spreading false claims and misleading narratives.

All evidence pointed squarely to the coalition's responsibility despite its initial disavowals. Among the key factors was its total control over Yemeni airspace, which rendered the flight of any aircraft—civilian or military—impossible without explicit permission and clearance from coalition command. Furthermore, dozens of witnesses and surviving victims confirmed hearing fighter jets overhead during the strike and witnessing the missiles hitting the funeral hall.

This was additionally corroborated by video footage recorded by activists and shared across media outlets and social platforms, capturing the sound of aircraft and the moments the missiles struck the hall.

The justifications presented in the coalition's confession—attempting to shift the blame onto figures within the Yemeni military staff for allegedly providing false and misleading intelligence that led to the airstrike without coalition command's knowledge—directly contradict previous statements made by coalition spokesman Brigadier General Ahmed Asiri. In numerous media briefings and interviews regarding the coalition's rules of engagement and protocols for protecting civilians and upholding international humanitarian law, Asiri repeatedly asserted that no aircraft could take off or strike a target without explicit authorization from coalition command. He maintained that such approval was granted only after coalition leadership independently verified the target's military nature, emphasizing that all operations were monitored and recorded from initial takeoff until the aircraft returned from their missions.

Ultimately, coalition forces were unable to sustain their denial in the face of overwhelming evidence pointing to Saudi aircraft as the perpetrator. Domestically, the event was extensively documented and filmed on the ground, accompanied by technical reports confirming that the munitions used belonged to the coalition and were delivered via aerial strikes.

Compounding this was compelling external evidence: satellite imagery captured by major international powers conclusively showed the Grand Hall being targeted by Saudi airstrikes. Confronted with this insurmountable body of proof, Saudi Arabia was left with no choice but to admit to the attack.

Weapons used in the airstrikes on The Grand Hall

Fragments of the missiles were recovered and secured by forensics specialists in the presence of representatives from human rights organizations, forensic experts, the Chief Prosecutor, and several journalists who inspected the scene during the evidence collection process.

Based on their expertise, the Deputy Director of the Forensics Department, which processed the recovered missile fragments, identified the munitions as follows:

"Initial examination of the recovered evidence—including bomb fins and fragments bearing manufacturing labels—confirms that these were aerial bombs. Specifically, they were U.S.-made 500-pound (225 kg) GBU-12 Paveway II laser-guided bombs, built on the Mark 82 (MK82) bomb body."

Description of the violation under International Humanitarian Low

The targeting of the Grand Hall by coalition airstrikes—while it was hosting a funeral wake for the Al-Ruwaishan family—amounts to a fully-fledged war crime. The hall is located far away from any military camps, zones, or front lines; it is situated on Fifty Street in Al-Sabeen district, a densely populated civilian area. At the time of the attack, the hall was packed with thousands of mourners who had gathered to offer their condolences, including children accompanied by their families.

This represents a clear and explicit violation of the laws of war and international humanitarian law (IHL), which stipulate that warring parties must at all times distinguish between military objectives and civilian objects, and refrain from launching attacks expected to cause incidental civilian harm. IHL extends protection to all civilians without discrimination, specifically highlighting children as the most vulnerable group during armed conflicts. Consequently, this atrocity constitutes a grave crime against children, as dozens of them were killed or injured in the strike.

The principle of distinction in international humanitarian law dictates that any direct attack against civilians or civilian objects is not merely a violation of IHL, but a serious breach that constitutes a war crime. Furthermore, international humanitarian law prohibits the use of any weapons incapable of distinguishing between civilians/civilian objects and combatants/military objectives, and bans attacks against those who are hors de combat (incapable of fighting), the wounded, and medical personnel and units.

Under the laws of war, an attack is unlawfully disproportionate if the expected loss of civilian life and damage to civilian objects would be excessive in relation to the concrete and direct military advantage anticipated from the attack. Serious violations of the laws of war committed willfully—that is, intentionally and recklessly—constitute war crimes.

Domestic and International stances and condemnations

- The targeting of the Grand Hall sparked strong international and regional backlash condemning the coalition's crime. Leading the reactions, U.S. National Security Council spokesman Ned Price stated that "U.S. security cooperation with Saudi Arabia is not a blank check." Price added: "In light of this and other recent incidents, we have initiated an immediate review of our already significantly reduced support to the Saudi-led Coalition."

- Former UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon commented on the atrocity, stating that “initial reports regarding the attack on the funeral hall in Sana’a point to the responsibility of the Arab Coalition,” while calling for the establishment of an international committee to investigate the strike. Speaking to reporters at UN headquarters in New York shortly after the attack, Ban Ki-moon described the bombing of the Grand Hall as a "horrific attack on civilians and a flagrant violation of international humanitarian law,” noting that “this was a community hall well known to all, packed with people, families, and children.”
- UN Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs Stephen O’Brien expressed the UN’s unequivocal condemnation of the crime, declaring: “The UN strongly, decisively, and unequivocally condemns the airstrike on the funeral assembly, which resulted in civilian casualties while the hall was filled with thousands of mourners.” The UN official added: “I am utterly appalled and deeply disturbed by news of civilian deaths, as reports indicate that over 140 people were killed and more than 500 injured in this outrageous attack. I offer my deepest condolences and sympathy to the families of the victims and the injured.” He urged a “swift, transparent, and impartial investigation into this incident to ensure accountability,” and called on “all parties to protect civilians and cease the use of explosive weapons or aerial bombardments in populated civilian areas.”
- UN Humanitarian Coordinator for Yemen, Jamie McGoldrick, condemned the “horrific attack” that targeted the funeral hall, noting that “preliminary medical reports from health officials in Yemen indicate that over 140 people were killed and roughly 525 others injured.” In a statement issued by the Office of the Humanitarian Coordinator in Yemen, he stated that “the humanitarian community in Yemen is shocked and outraged by the airstrikes targeting the Grand Community Hall, which was packed with thousands of mourners offering their condolences.” The Humanitarian Coordinator highlighted that “Yemeni first responders rushed to the scene under extraordinarily difficult conditions to assist the dead and wounded resulting from this irresponsible act,” while reminding all parties to the conflict of “their obligations under international humanitarian law to protect civilians and civilian infrastructure.”

- UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Zeid Ra'ad Al Hussein, urgently called for an independent international investigation into violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in Yemen, stating: "Since the start of this conflict in Yemen, weddings, markets, hospitals, schools, and now mourners at a funeral have been bombed, resulting in massive civilian casualties and a complete lack of accountability for those responsible." He pointed out that "the Human Rights Council's failure to take decisive action by launching an international investigation fosters a climate of impunity and routine violations; such heinous attacks simply cannot be allowed to continue under any circumstances." He added that the international community has a legal and moral obligation to respond forcefully to these appalling and escalating levels of civilian casualties in Yemen.
- UN Special Envoy for Yemen, Ismail Ould Cheikh Ahmed, declared: "Every measure must be taken to bring the perpetrators of these atrocious attacks to justice. We are all deeply disturbed that these strikes occurred at a moment when significant progress had been achieved after lengthy negotiations, and just as we were negotiating a lasting agreement."
- Italy: Represented by Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation Paolo Gentiloni, the Italian government condemned the Grand Hall massacre, emphasizing at the time that escalating military attacks against civilians was "unacceptable."
- France: On the day following the tragedy, France called for an independent investigation to uncover the circumstances surrounding the strike, noting that the crime reaffirmed the urgent need for a political solution to end the war in Yemen.
- Russia & Canada: Russian Ambassador to Yemen Oleg Derimov visited the site of the attack. In an official statement, the Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs demanded a rigorous and objective investigation, as well as swift and severe punishment for the perpetrators. Meanwhile, the Canadian Foreign Ministry called on the Coalition to honor its commitment to conduct an immediate investigation.
- Numerous countries alongside dozens of international human rights and humanitarian organizations voiced their strong condemnation and outrage over the horrific crime committed by Saudi Coalition aircraft against thousands of innocent civilians who had gathered at the Grand Hall in Sana'a to offer condolences.

Local and international human rights organizations expressed deep disappointment and astonishment at the international silence surrounding such atrocities. They denounced the United Nations' passive stance, criticizing its pattern of turning a blind eye and ignoring the ongoing massacres committed by the Saudi-led Coalition—violations that had crossed all red lines over the preceding year and a half. Rights advocates argued that this silence emboldened the Coalition to persist in its violations of international law and the rights of the Yemeni people, calling for an immediate end to the aggression and the prosecution of those responsible, chief among them the leaders of the Coalition countries.

Furthermore, several national political parties condemned the horrific massacre carried out by Coalition aircraft in the war on Yemen. They expressed their utter rejection of this heinous crime, which violated all human values, international laws, and conventions, asserting that the deliberate bombing of the Grand Hall constitutes a war crime for which the perpetrators must be held accountable.

Human Rights Watch Visits the Site of the Crime:

Human Rights Watch stated that the strike was unlawful, identifying the munition used as a U.S.-made GBU-12 Paveway II laser-guided bomb. The organization noted that "the funeral hall was crowded with hundreds of people, including children, when it came under attack."

Quoting a witness, Human Rights Watch reported: "When I arrived at the hall, there were more than 50 charred bodies. Many remained recognizable, while others were half-burned or decapitated, and some were nearly impossible to identify."

Following the attack, Human Rights Watch released a report urging an immediate, credible international investigation into the strike on the funeral ceremony. The organization emphasized that the bombing underscores the urgent need for independent international inquiries into violations of the laws of war in Yemen, calling on the United States, the United Kingdom, and other governments to immediately suspend arms sales to Saudi Arabia.

Recommendation

1- Work to stop the unjust aggression on Yemen on land and human.

2- We demand international organization, headed by the United Nations, to pressurize the countries of the coalition of aggression to stop crimes committed against civilians, especially women and children.

3- We demand the United Nations to cancel its decision to remove the aggression coalition from the list of killing and maiming children, as they continue committing terrible massacres against women and children since the beginning of aggression till this day.

4- We call on all human rights, legal and media organizations and bodies to monitor and document all violations and crimes committed against civilians, especially women and children, and expose them to international public opinion in preparation for bringing the perpetrators to justice.

5- We demand to format an independent fact-finding committee to investigate this crime and all the crimes and violations that have occurred since the beginning of the aggression on March 26, 2015 and submit the leadership of the coalition of aggression and the perpetrators of crimes and massacres to courts.
